There is no task more difficult than to write a biography that will satisfy all readers or present the individual typified in all his acts, thoughts or writings; that will place him be fore the world an incarnate statue with background of sky-horizon whereon the manmental, moral, and physical-is clear cut and sharply defined, to be seen of all time, known and remembered. That it is easy to write a DALLY II. F AT 25 p in a vance. Daly to had one many grouning shelves bear testiWEERLY Div A: 52 ten copes, $1.90

Li phys. or any n miser good one is shown by the fewness of the biographies that exist a hundred years, save upon the dusty shelves of public libraries or the An-121 07 task that every penny-a-liner thinks himselt qualified to perform. Dying great men might well cry out with Burns, "Dont let that awk ward squad fire over my grave." But it would be in vain. "Fall in line! Ready! Aim Fire!" and the platoon pops away, and will pop away like companies at a militia muster or a pack of Chinese crackers. The writer must bring to bear the patience and perseverance of a mole; he must be willing to dig and grabble in all sorts of places to collect facts: he must then have judgment to select, arrange and classify these, so as to present the man as he is to the jublic, and to deduce, not only from these but from those not given, his individuality. Conscientious he must be, of course, and as a'l men's opinions color their state-The Disposition of the Dead Timber at ments, a prime, and without-which-nothing prerequisite is that the biographer should be viendly to the unlucky biographed. To take the last first; this is do ciledly the most readable biography of Jack and it will shink and go ber on every hill aud son that has ever been written. It has a clear the entire volume beyond question or eavil End t waked the shade of Samu 1. And what much the reader may find fault here and there he is unwilling to lay it down till it is finished lt is a picture and an excellent one, though no in all particulars a likeness of that colossus ron, who from half a century till within les han twenty-five years past, occupied the houghts of all men in this country; who mor han any man except Jefferson, has impressed his mind and character upon the country The style, however, is very unequal; in som places very pure and sparkling, at others tainted with inelegancies, provincialisms, and

As a collector of facts we are willing to con cele some credit to Mr. Parton; and indeed, 1 ssume from the face of the narrative, that h s worthy of all praise for his laborious effort discharge of that duty. But whether h as acted with strict impartially is another luestion. In writing the earlier part of Jack on's life, we think he has given the outburs t superabundant energy running into dissips tion, rather more prominence than strict just ice to his hero required. It was in a wild time and Jackson and his compeers are not to b tried by the more staid canons of the presen day. We do not wish to palliate them. Jack n "hadn't ought to have done it;" but those men of the rifle and hunting-shirt, the actor in the revolution, had so much of the gun powder ground into them, so much of the su erabundant life in the stout hearts beating i heir brawny bosoms, that a spree, a frolic or : igh, n wand then, was absolutely necessar; holds and d fi h has Alice d ing this, we to their existence. This proneness of Mr. Parton to dwell upon the faults of his biographed assumes a more serious aspect in some other places. Take or instance, the deplorable Dickinson duel The facts in that case are briefly these: Dicknson made zome highly insulting remarks coneerning Mrs. Jackson; was called upon by Jackson, and denied using them, or said that, if be did, it was while he was drunk. This apology was accepted. He afterwards repent ed the same gross offense, as we learn from the evidence of Gen Sam. Houston. (p. 269. Jackson requested Capt. Ervin, the father-in law of Dickinson, to make Dickinson hold hi tongue; that his (Jackson's) enemies were usin that gentleman as a tool, and he wished u difficulty with him. About this time another lispute, concerning a wager, was brough about by a meddling fellow named Swann, who meddled between these two inflammable speci mens, insulted Jackson, was promised a caning and got it. Now for the other duel. It will be remem-

It seems to us, upon a somewhat careful reading of Mr. Partou's book, that the evidence a both cases rested upon the same basis. If

r Parton does not see sufficient cause for lackson's enmity, we refer him to the extracts n pages 203-9, in which it is stated that Dick. nson had uttered 'disparaging words of Mrs Ja kson;" words once apologized for, after wards repeated, and no apology given. I Mr. Parton is of opinion that any adjustment of this second offense had been made, we refe im to the evidence of Capt. Ervin, the father n-law of Dickinson:

"He admitted, however, that there was en-rity between Jackson and Dickinson before is own quarrel with Jackson began." What more probable, what more certain han that Capt. Erviu referred to this very suse of offense, the insulting remarks about drs. Jackson. He knew of it, for Gen. Jack on had gone to him expressly and requeste im to make Dickinson hold his tongue These evidences of sympathy for the one par y against the other are clear to us. The milies and pharasaical remarks about no nderstanding the cause, and possibly Jackso was not most to blame, are simply contempt

If, however, the reader would see the differ nce in the tone when Mr. Parton speaks of a ero whom he loves, and one of whose opinons he disapproves, let him compare his acount of the Burr-Hamilton duel, in his biograby of the former, and his account of this one f Jackson and Dickinson. Now there is, ot ourse, a reason for this difference, and it is be found scattered all over the book. Paron is a Federalist, a Whig, a Republican, an Oppositionist, or all of them. The stronges oof is to be found on pages 567-8:

The IRON being absorbed by the blood, and thus circulating through the whole system, no part of the body can sacape their truly wonderful influence.

The experience of thousands daily proves that no prepara ion of iron can for a moment be compared with it. Impurities of the blood, depression of vital energy, pale and otherwise sickly complexions Indicate its necessity in almost every conceivable case. In all cases of female debility (flour albus, chlorosis, &c.) its effects are delightfully renovating No remedy has ever been discovered, in the whole history of medicine, which exerts such prompt, happy and fully restorative effects. Good appetite, complete digestion, rapid acquisition of strength, with an unusual disposition for scitus and cheerful exercise, immediately follow its use. As a grand stomachic and general restorative it has no superior and no substitute.
